Behind him, on either side, come galloping a Hobby-Lion and a Hobby-Unicorn, prancing respectively on the legs of a Boy, who wears a red military jacket and gold crown, and of a Girl with a diadem circling her golden hair. The Boy bears a shield and The Little Girl carries a sceptre. Singing as he comes, and dashing into the middle of the shouting Dancers--who draw back in a wide circle--Quilloquon reins up his hobbyhorse, cracking loudly a riding-whip in his hand. To the flickings of this, the Lion and the Unicorn caper round and round him--sceptre thwacking shield, and roar answering whinny in their dance--while Quilloquon, dancing with them, sings lustily: QUILLOQUON Yankee Doodle came to town Upon a spankin pony, He stuck a feather...
