The value for the length of the base must be diminished by the amount of backward pressure, errors of alignment, and errors of inclination; but the remaining errors having a double sign must be regarded as probable; if individually they be represented by r r r . rH , and the total error by R , we will have As the sides of the triangulation are at different elevations and the base and check-base not on the same plane, it is necessary to know their lengths at some common-datum plane. This by common consent is the half-tide level of the ocean. curvature at the mean latitude of the base. From the corrected value for the length of the base c is to be subtracted. If the elevation of the base was found by different methods, or from different bench-marks, an uncertainty may arise in the value of h , giving a probable error for c .
